AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

Chicago Day at the Great Exposition.

THE GREATEST EVENT YET

The Attendance Larger Than Any Other Day by Many Thousand—The Most Sanguine Hopes of the Native Chicagoans and the World's Fair Officials Fully Realized

CHICAGO, Oct 10 — Seven hundred thousand people, doubtless the greatest crowd that ever congregated visited the world's fair yesterday, breaking the greatest one day record at Paris by an overwhelming majority, completely smothering the big day figures of any other exposition ever held, and establishing a mark which it is safe to predict the present generation will never see attained.

The most sanguine hopes of the native Chicagoans and the world's fair officials were realized to their fullest extent. The dedication and opening days of the exposition appeared lilliputians in contrast with their festival. As soon as the transportation companies began to move the multitude of humanity towards the Jackson park on cable, electric, horse and steam cars and the lake steamers, they found thousands ready to be carried to the grounds.

The turnstiles were set in motion at 6:30 and there was a waiting crowd outside at that hour. From that time from the administration dome the eye could behold a mighty army of men, women and children marching from the entrances over the broad walks and along the great casino all in holiday dress, smiling and merry and carrying all manner of receptacles for lunches. The advance purchases of over 500,000 souvenir tickets prevented a blockade at the ticket offices and the hundreds of employes at the gates handled the stream of incoming people without trouble.

The scenes created by the multitude probably have had no counterpart in American history. In many respects they reminded the observer of the scenes on England's great derby day in Epsom Downs, of London's bridge and streets adjacent to the stations. Every exposition building was decorated, especially in honor of Chicago, but the Illinois building was the most [illegible] of all. The dome was covered with flags and streamers, which fluttered in the mild morning breeze. The walls and windows and roofs of other buildings were brilliant with colors of all nations. In the [illegible] of Illinois building, the magic name of Chicago was set in electric globes ready for the night's illumination.

The first event arranged by the world's fair commissioners took place at 9 o'clock and was more closely associated with Chicago's birth and early history than anything else on the program. The old Pottawatomie chief Simeon Pokagon, whose father [illegible] the land upon which Chicago is now situated, came from his home in Hartford, Mich., for [illegible] stood beside a Columbian bell with uncovered head in the dress of white and [illegible]. He was born [illegible] the [illegible] to the United States. He wore a [illegible] looked a typical Indian of the [illegible] although he came with a message of peace, standing as a historical figure between the Chicago of [illegible] and the Chicago of to-day.

The two old [illegible] Pottawatomie chiefs were the [illegible]. Several thousand people [illegible] and push [illegible] to [illegible] their hands. Miss Emma C. Sickels, the heroine of [illegible], introduced the two Indians to the multitude which surrounded the [illegible].

Referring to Chief Pokagon [illegible] said: "This magnificent city now has as its guest an old and feeble man whose life has been spent [illegible] in the land of his father. Where his father once presided over council, he now returns to [illegible] exposition the peace and progress [illegible]. This is the first time that a place of honor or any recognition has been given at the Columbian exposition to the first inhabitants and owners of his country. [illegible] these two Indians stand [illegible] because the United States government has not yet paid them for it. But money will be paid [illegible] pealing through moral and [illegible]."

Chief Pokagon was received with great cheering, waving of hats, etc. He had his speech written out, but only read part of it, as his command of English was not sufficient for [illegible] nor his voice strong. This is part of what he said: "[illegible] any of my countrymen feel the sting of neglect because their rights have been ignored at this great world's fair until now. I beseech them to lay aside all bitterness [illegible]. Let us not crucify ourselves by going over the bloody trials we have [illegible], but rather let us hope for the future and rejoice in the present.

"The question comes up to us again and again what can be done for the best good of the race. The answer to me is plain. We must give up the pursuits of our fathers. In place of the gun, bow and arrow we must take up the plow and live as white friends. They must learn and love to wave the stars and stripes and at all time rejoice that they are American citizens. Our children must be educated and learn the trades of white men. We must convince the world in this Columbian year that we are men and not savages. I was pained [illegible] that some who should have been interested in our people discouraged our coming to the fair alleging openly that we were heartless, soulless and godless. The great west has been swallowed up by the white men and by all [illegible] we are children of this great republic. When I crossed the great bar and entered the gates of the white city I stood aghast trying to drink in its vastness. My heart throbbed within me as in boyhood, when the first time I saw in hand a frightened deer leaped out before me."

Chief John Young was then presented to the people, but he did not speak. The two chiefs, Miss Sickels and Thaddeus S. Taylor, who came to Chicago in 1837 and whose father, Latherop M. Taylor of South Bend, was a witness to the site of Chicago's [illegible] Pottawatomie gospel. The red, white and blue covered rope made from scores of contributions from all nations at the fair, and gave the big bell a number of quick strokes followed by the plaudits of the multitude. After being photographed they retired with their friends to see the fair.

The ground of the terminal plaza could not be seen, for the masses of the people who filled it in front of the stand erected for the chorus of the 2,000 voices under the direction of W. L. Tomlins and orchestra. The program was Overture, 'All Nations,' 'Star Spangled Banner' refrain by the multitude, 'Dixie,' 'My Native Land,' 'My Old Kentucky Home,' 'Down on the Suwanee River' and ending with 'Columbia the Gem of the Ocean.'

While the festival of song and instrumental music was in progress, Chicago's crack society cavalry troop, the Chicago Hussars passed by on their fine horses from the Midway Plaisance. A path for them was made through the multitude with difficulty.

The face of the earth on the plaza bounded by the terminal station, administration, machinery hall and mining buildings was hidden from human sight at noon by a hundred thousand souls brought together by a common desire to hear the bell of liberty ring out in honor of Chicago day and see if they could not hear Mayor Harrison, who held the rope of all nations which brought the clapper in contact with the bell. From a height the sea of upturned faces, hats and bonnets presented a picture which has never been seen in this country. The people pushed and crushed against each other the center of the crush being just around the bell, where the mayor of Chicago stood with rope in hand prepared to ring out for Chicago.

Miss Sickels presented to him the original deed to the site upon which Chicago is built. The mayor in accepting the historic relic in the name of the city, said that the only people on earth who were entitled and merited receiving it were the people of Chicago. He recited the early history of Chicago when it was a trading post between the great lake and the Mississippi. He declared Chicago had thriven as no other city had ever thrived. Twenty two years ago it had been devastated by fire. The pain of its suffering had gone to the utmost parts of the earth. Like Niobe it was all tears and the world thought it would remain in tears, but with that energy peculiar to the people it has risen phoenix like from the ashes. He acknowledged his descent from the original owners of Chicago and informed the multitude that the blood of Pocahontas flowed in his veins. Chicago would always keep the deed which had just been presented and see that law and order were always maintained so that the city would become greater.

The tens of thousands then surged away from the bell-ringing scene and quickly dissolved in the mass of humanity which could be seen on every side.

The force of guards was entirely inadequate for the occasion and complaints of pocket picking, fainting women and struggling people were heard and seen during the half hour which was occupied by the interesting ceremony.

The crowning glory of the anniversary day was the pageantry which 600,000 people viewed within the gates of the Columbian city at night. Soon after the sun went down to be replaced by the power of electricity the procession of 26 magnificent floats with their occupants of both sexes entered the fair grounds through the Sixty second street gate. The first represented Chicago in her growth [illegible] by the Iowa state band. Then came the genius of music surrounded by a select chorus of 50 women. The next float represented Chicago and its typical motto, 'I will,' guided by liberty and surrounded by all states of the Union and welcomed by all people of the Union. At the four corners were music, sculpture, science and literature.

Chicago in 1812, a trading post and the memorable picture was next portrayed in a realistic [illegible] in [illegible] were next depicted in floats which called forth thundering applause from the multitude, from which the illuminated throng passed around the court of honor. The next came [illegible] representing Chicago in 1871. The [illegible] of Chicago was represented by an argosy with a single sail on which the world's [illegible] symbol of Chicago was emblazoned. The most [illegible] float in the entire procession was [illegible] of Columbus at the court of Isabella. The characters of the float were assumed by the members of the Columbian club of Chicago.

[illegible] furnished by foreign born residents of Chicago illustrating foreign [illegible] and foreign events. Great Britain, Sweden, Ireland, Bohemia, France, Canada and Poland were represented by [illegible] more [illegible] the Chicago [illegible] had [illegible] humanity partially illuminated by the electric lights.

The last [illegible] in the procession was 'Electricity,' the [illegible] drawn by eight horses. It was represented by [illegible] ed with [illegible] electric lights.

There was [illegible] in the procession after those illustrating the history of Chicago had passed, and [illegible] that the [illegible] was over.

The fireworks on the lake front [illegible] the grandest was magnificent. [illegible] illustrative of old Fort Dearborn, the old city hall, Chicago welcoming the world, Old Glory carried by Baldwin, the aeronaut into the heavens, Chicago triumphant, [illegible] a reproduction of Niagara Falls, doing the pyrotechnic [illegible] burning of Chicago, covering an area of 14,000 square feet, producing four scenes and the picture of Chicago's first mayor.

The wooded island was ablaze with fairy lamps.

All the avenues surrounding the court of honor and every point of importance [illegible], the court even the roof of the [illegible] were filled with spectators of the afternoon procession which was [illegible] the [illegible]. Nearly 2,500 boys and girls accompanied by bands marched in sections to present the history of commerce and resources of the American states. The standards and shields of the states with their [illegible] and the year of their entry in the Union were borne at the head of each procession.

A large number of casualties resulted at the downtown terminal stations from the overcrowded cars.

Among the injured by minor accidents were:

Charles A. Clark of Buffalo was struck by a gripcar on Madison street and killed.

William J. Barr, Hopkins county, Ky., struck by a gripcar and seriously injured, taken to hospital.

Andrew Wells, Waupaca, Wis., taken to hospital knocked down by gripcar.

Miss Nettie Rogers, Columbus, O.; Mrs Matilda Stewart, Fondulac, Wis., and Charles Long, Cincinnati, were badly bruised in the crush at the Congress elevated station.

Thomas Robertson of Fremont, Minn., struck by a cablecar at 33[illegible] Lincoln avenue, died on the way to the hospital.

James Malcolm, a prominent ranch owner of Iowa, killed by a fall from the Intramural station.

John Dryden, Columbus, O., employed by James Paine Sons, injured by bursting mortar at world's fair grounds. Died later at Mercy hospital.

SHERMAN ACT IN THE SENATE

It Is Discussed by Several Senators but the Question Is No Nearer a Solution Than Before—The Debate on the Federal Election Bill Finally Finished in the House

WASHINGTON, Oct 10 — The session of the senate was given up entirely to considering the Sherman act. The question came up in three separate forms. The first was a sort of personal explanation by Mr Harris (Dem., Tenn.) in reply to resolutions adopted at a joint meeting of the Memphis Cotton and Merchants Exchange, condemning the course of the Tennessee senators on the question.

Mr Harris declared his disregard of a threat contained in the resolutions and said that the maintenance of his self respect was of vastly more importance to him than any office within the gift of any people.

After that incident came the resolution offered by Mr Wolcott (Rep., Colo.) last Saturday instructing the finance committee to put into legislative form the bimetallic declaration of the policy contained in the Voorhees substitute.

Mr Wolcott criticised the president for his letter to Governor Northen of Georgia, characterizing it as an offensive and unfitting [illegible] tions that should exist between the legislative and executive departments of the government.

Mr Voorhees made the resolution the groundwork of a speech defending the repeal bill in its entirety [illegible] ment that it [illegible] silver [illegible] if repeated a hundred [illegible] was not true. He declared [illegible] ready when the Sherman [illegible] disgraced the statute [illegible] promptly in carrying out the pledges which the bill contained.

The Wolcott resolution was then sent to the calendar and the repeal bill proper taken up. [illegible] (Dem.) [illegible] the floor for [illegible] hours and a half and [illegible] his remarks when the senate at 5 [illegible] adjourned.

England's feet may be superior to ours but her right [illegible] not so [illegible] is ours.

The discovery [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] New York [illegible] calls the proceedings of the Senate.

Election day is now only a few brief weeks away. The Democrats of Ohio are preparing for a great victory [illegible] when McKinleyism will be put out of sight.

A couple of [illegible] [illegible] principles [illegible] the Press Association's telegraphic matter sent THE TIMES-DEMOCRAT yesterday and inadvertently found place in these columns. It is needless to say the sentiment of those two paragraphs did not comport with the general political sentiment of this paper.

The University of Pennsylvania has decided to offer among the college courses this year one designed to prepare young men for newspaper work. It is the intention to give the students a thorough training in the principles of economics, politics and finance, together with drilling [illegible] the newspaper work.

The figures of the Government indicate that the yield of wheat this year will not exceed [illegible] 000,000 bushels. The most liberal estimate of the surplus carried over from previous crops is 100,000,000 bushels and thus it would seem that the total available supply of wheat in this country for the crop year 1893-4 is not over 47[illegible] 000,000 bushels. It is estimated that domestic consumption for food, seed and other purposes will require at least 3[illegible] 000,000 bushels which is nearly the whole of the estimated yield of this season. This would leave an apparent surplus [illegible] reserves of 110,000 bushels.

An exchange refers pointedly to Senator Peffer's vacant seat. There is a mistake. Senator Peffer's seat is not vacant. It's his head that is in that condition.—Kansas City Journal.

The Philadelphia Record denominates Senator Stewart and his obstructionist colleagues in the United States Senate as "Anarchists." This title seems at first glance is rather severe, but these recalcitrant statesmen almost deserve it.

To-morrow Senator Voorhees will ask that the Senate sit continuously from that day until a vote has been reached on the repeal bill. This measure may bring some of the obstructionist Senators to a sense of the duty they owe to their country.

The transatlantic record for the fastest western voyage which has been held for the past year by the steamship Paris now passes to the credit of the Lucania, the new Cunarder, which is making the voyage in 5 days 13 hours and [illegible] minutes has reduced the time by [illegible] minutes. The new record has been fairly established and the great work accomplished by the Lucania's clipper bow may possibly lead to a still greater reduction in the time required for the transatlantic voyage. The five day dream of a voyage from shore to shore may yet be realized.

Not with republican leaders in Ohio [illegible] be found who are willing to help McKinley stump the State that [illegible] [illegible] is being imported to come in to prevent Neal's majority from being overwhelming. From Missouri, from Illinois, from Maine and from Iowa, spellers have been brought by the money of the protection barons to help save McKinleyism. But it will be without effect. McKinley is doomed to defeat. [illegible] [illegible] election day Larry Neal will be chosen Governor by the voters of the Buckeye State. The sophistries of the protectionists will not [illegible] [illegible] the people [illegible] in the present money distress see the fulfillment of the prophecies of the Democrats who years ago predicted just such results. [illegible] is the inevitable result of the policy of the Republican party [illegible] party owned body and soul by the protection [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] policy.

High Explosives

There are certain explosives of high power which when heated burn quietly if freely exposed or if confined explode only at the spot where heat is applied without the whole mass taking part in the explosion. Nitroglycerol, dynamite, gun cotton, picric acid and the new German military powder are examples. This is said to be because they are bad conductors of their own explosive wave. If, however, the same substances are subjected to a violent shock by the explosion in their midst of small charges of mercury fulminate, the shock seems to affect all the molecules of the explosive at once, and the whole mass of the latter explodes with enormous violence.—New York Sun.

GRANDMA [illegible] SAID

"Always [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] when you are [illegible]
Don't leave it in the middle of the room or standing carelessly
[illegible] that grandmother still ascribes when [illegible]
I jumped up and ran out of doors a reckless hobble de hoy.

Always set your chair back when you are going away
Don't leave it in the middle of the room or standing carelessly.
These words repeated long ago come over fresh to mind,
When it led [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] overlooked or left to lag behind.

In the daily walks of busy life when we think [illegible] [illegible] time
To be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] almost look upon politeness as a crime
We are quite too apt from carelessness to think [illegible] not so
That it matters not if we forget to set our chairs away.

But it will be found that daily life will be more worth the living
If we hold in harmony the precepts of receiving and of giving
If we [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] childhood days
And [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

A Wonderful Timekeeping Automaton

One of the most wonderful timekeepers known to the horologist was made in London about 100 years ago and sent by the president of the East India company as a gift to the emperor of China. The case was made in the form of a chariot, in which was seated the figure of a woman. This figure was of pure ivory and gold and sat with her right hand resting upon a tiny clock fastened to the side of the vehicle. A part of the wheels which kept track of the flight of time were hidden in the body of a tiny bird which had seemingly just alighted upon the lady's finger.

Above was a canopy so arranged as to conceal a silver bell. This bell was fitted with a miniature hammer of the same metal, and although it appeared to have no connection with the clock regularly struck the hours and could be made to repeat by touching a diamond button on the lady's bodice. In the chariot at the ivory lady's feet there was a golden figure of a dog, and above and in front were two birds apparently flying before the chariot. This beautiful ornament was made chiefly of gold and was elaborately decorated with precious stones.—St. Louis Republic.

He packed his belongings with [illegible] a slight regret. When [illegible] [illegible] things all out he turned to the workmen who were waiting to begin tearing down the building and remarked in a rather sure [illegible]:

"Well boys, you may have all you find in this old trap."

The workmen began on the old floor which had been worn in hollows by age. It had not been replaced since it was originally laid.

One of the men ripped up a board with his crowbar, causing a cloud of dust. When he got it out of his eyes he saw something shining in the crack.

He picked it up, and it proved to be a dime. Further investigation revealed the fact that the crack was lined with silver.

This was an incentive to the workmen. They plied their crowbars with remarkable energy, and in nearly every place in this instance they were amply rewarded.

In every crack of the floor silver dimes were found. Some of them bore dates of nearly half a century ago. The men gathered the coin in handfuls.

The cigar dealer, in speaking of the occurrence, said that he hadn't the slightest idea that so much money could be lost through carelessness and a poor floor even in 35 years.

"But it won't happen again," he said. "When I heard of it I immediately gave orders to have my new store refloored with hard wood and no cracks at my own expense."—New York Herald.

Farmer Commits Suicide.

TOPEKA, Oct. 3.—Yesterday afternoon William Goodwin, a prominent farmer of Riley county, committed suicide by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a razor. He was accompanying his wife to Manhattan and when they passed a thick hedge fence he asked her to hold the team a moment. In an instant she heard terrible groans and when she reached her husband he was dying. She can not assign any reason for the act.

Rooms to Let.

Mrs. Fangle—Have you secured a lodger for your second floor yet, Mr. Goslin?

Goslin (horrified)—I haven't been looking for a lodger, ma'am.

Mrs. Fangle—Why, I'm certain my husband told me you had rooms to let in your upper story.—Wasp.

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

HOMEMADE FERTILIZERS

A Virginian's Common Sense Talk on a Subject of Practical Interest

A fertile soil is one that contains in a soluble and available form all the needed elements of plant food. Of all these potash, phosphoric and sulphuric acids, silica, nitrogen and carbon are the soonest exhausted by cultivation and therefore the most necessary to be supplied by artificial means. If the farmer will take good care to return [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] plies of these in his soils [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] almost every case furnish an abundance of the others. The art of [illegible] [illegible] soil fertile lies in a turning [illegible] [illegible] enough at least of humus [illegible] phosphoric acid to make up [illegible] [illegible] of these elements occasioned by cultivation and cropping.

THE WRATTEN BUTCHERY

Three Men Arrested and Imprisoned For the Crime.

WASHINGTON, Ind., Oct. 9.—A warrant was made by Constable John Pinter charging Lon Williams, Oscar Brown and Bill Kase with the murder of the Wratten family. Officers went to their homes about midnight and arrested them and took them to Huntington, where they were placed on the train and taken to Jeffersonville prison for safe keeping.

They are now safe behind the bars and as soon as the excitement dies down in this city they will be brought here for a preliminary hearing. These persons are notorious, and according to report Kase has made some statements that will prove very damaging to Williams, Brown and another well known party. The excitement has been intense all day, and large crowds are on the streets discussing it.

A SPINSTER.

She became a spinster 27 years ago. Thus fate decreed it.

Young men had become afflicted with a passion for Caroline—wartime gallants three decades back. But before their mouths had caught courage from their eyes or their arms had acted out the convictions of their silences they had received an unspoken No. Her proud bearing was part of nature's gift, and if in part it was a screen for her timidity, the mask was too deceptive, had Caroline but known it. Her lovers fell away one by one from a fortress that only seemed invulnerable.

When this troop of cowards had yielded there had stepped forward a man of mature [illegible] mental compass. Though young he had served his country—not [illegible] [illegible] passively but actively in battle, a private at first. He had fought bravely and when graduated from the school of war had an ugly scar on his left arm to show for it. He was almost ashamed of it—so slight. The same bullet had killed a comrade near by. He had ambitions noble string. He had a will of iron energies unfaltering. He possessed besides a fine physique, the sinuous physical backing to uphold [illegible] in his exploits. He was persistent in [illegible] elbowing his way forward among his fellowmen. He loved Caroline.

[illegible] often analyzed her feelings [illegible] [illegible] him. She knew [illegible] [illegible] was [illegible] approved his [illegible] reverence [illegible] [illegible] demand [illegible] answer, [illegible] [illegible] But he had [illegible] [illegible] Still [illegible] is obstinate [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] moment [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] or broader [illegible] his [illegible] [illegible] play. [illegible] Answer me finally!" he [illegible]

But she was now growing old. She [illegible] [illegible] have made [illegible] [illegible] tokens had [illegible] [illegible] personal gifts from Father [illegible]. But this not did.

The following day Caroline penned a letter to distant [illegible]. "I have a friend who [illegible] hair is becoming [illegible]," she wrote. "Please send me [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] ointment. She was [illegible] [illegible] in her younger days [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that hair stuff.' And [illegible] only a dye, and for a friend." She finished the epistle and posted it [illegible].

[illegible] few days later a small parcel came [illegible] the mail addressed to Caroline. She took it to her room and, although there was no one in the house but herself, locked the door. She pondered. If she should use the [illegible] would she be the [illegible] deceived? Would the rest of the world [illegible] the deception at once? She sat there awhile pensively listless in her manner of thought, skimming the [illegible]. Then a sudden revulsion against the deceit of the world [illegible] [illegible] her. She [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and drew in a long breath. She applied the spark of self [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] at the ex[illegible] plosion.

Never!

There was no danger now that she would ever use the dye. She perused the list of testimonials. Mrs. [illegible] was the [illegible] [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] signature. It would be no disgrace to grow gray if she were married now. Surely not. Not so much of a disgrace if she were a widow now. So she thought. But an unmarried woman! A spinster! She drew the cork from the bottle and poured its contents out of the window. With a penknife she scraped off the label. She put those scrapings, the testimonials, the wrappers and inner wrappers into her pocket. She would burn them later.

* * *

Five years ago an oculist examined Caroline's eyes and told her she was nearsighted—a fact she had known for the previous decade. He prescribed glasses, and she purchased them. She concealed them in that drawer of the bureau that was always kept locked, except when it was necessary to take out or put away certain valuables and keepsakes. When nobody was about she would wear them. She was reluctant to do so, but they added to her comfort. And the newspapers and Thackeray and Hawthorne and Balzac must be read, even at the expense of personal vanity.

An unmarried woman, with no father, no mother, an income of a pittance, a single servant, was excusable for doing almost anything. So she wore them. She did not dare to look at herself closely in the mirror when she first put them on. She stood about 10 feet back, at which distance she noticed that her hair had an iron gray appearance. She gained courage a while later and examined herself in the hand glass. That iron gray shade was her optical illusion. There were black hairs and white hairs—a slight preponderance of white. Rarely thereafter did she wear them when gazing into the mirror. She turned her head away when walking past it. Every time she put them on she did it with a wry face. Once she cried and was about to throw them away, but restrained herself.

* * * * *

A few weeks ago Caroline plucked the last black hair from her snow white head. She did it with the same gentleness with which 10 years before she had drawn out the first thread of white, the one ray of light in the black darkness. She took from a bureau drawer a small envelope and from this abstracted that original curiosity. She placed it by the side of this latter day curio—the black hair, the last remnant of tresses that had been the admiration of her schoolfriends. She wound them about her fingers and tied them, then placed them in the envelope.

It was the spirit of the gambler in his moment of desperation with which she had lost all. The world should know now that Caroline could grow old uncomplainingly. She picked up a volume of "The Scarlet Letter" that was near at hand to steady the envelope while she wrote simply:

"I am a spinster. John loved me and would have continued to love me. Now he is the statesman upon whose words depends the welfare of nations. I have discovered that I loved him, but I was proud. He would [illegible] [illegible] —"

She locked it in the bureau and tried [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] —Irving S. Underhill in Philadelphia Illustrated.

WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM

Something Peculiar to Say the Least

An Event Which Has Puzzled the Doctors Not a Little

The Occurrence Has Created a Great Deal of Comment

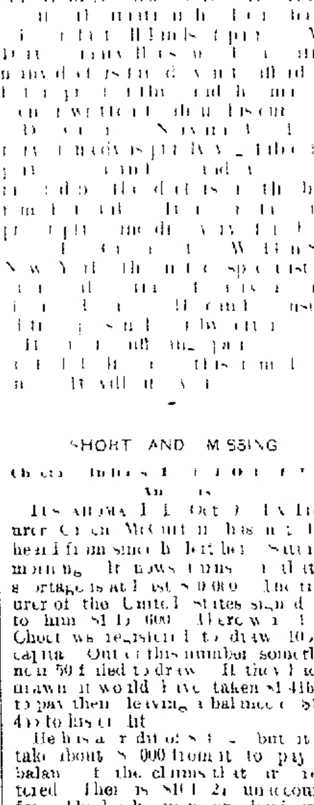

The following remarkable account we have from the man's own lips.

Mr. Amos R. Dutter is well known in Indianapolis, Ind., living at 22[illegible] West Chesapeake street. He says:

"[illegible] years ago a pain came in my left foot and went all over me. I had such severe pain in my head that I could get no rest day or night. I called a doctor. He said I had rheumatism, but he could not relieve me.

"Then I went to taking patent medicines and bought a very [illegible] I could see advertised for rheumatism, but all failed to give me any relief. Then I called in the doctors and five good ones treated me, but all failed to relieve me. I was taken down. I suffered intense pain. My flesh got so sore that I could not bear my clothes to touch me. My left side got numb from my feet to my head. I would feel a tingling in my side, in a second I would fall prostrated.

"I could not sleep night or day only when under the influence of morphine. I could not walk one square without resting. I would have to set my cane out first and step with my right foot and then drag the left foot up."

SHORT AND MISSING

Cheyenne Indians [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Oct. [illegible]—[illegible] Treasurer Green McCurtain has not been heard from since he left here Saturday morning. It now transpires that his shortage is at least $[illegible],000. The treasurer of the United States signed over to him $1[illegible],600. There were [illegible] Choctaws registered to draw $10[illegible] per capita. Out of this number something near 50 failed to draw. If they had all drawn it would have taken $1,416,11[illegible] to pay them, leaving a balance of $1[illegible] [illegible] to his credit.

He has a credit of $[illegible] but it will take about $[illegible],000 from it to pay the balance of the claims that are registered. There is $101,2[illegible] unaccounted for. The Lake men are loud in denouncing him and a number of Jones men also denounce him. His bond is $30,000. His shortage may reach $140,000 or $150,000.

An Exaggerated Story

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The Simla correspondent of The Times says that there is no truth in the story from Calcutta to the effect that 11 mutinous Sepoys belonging to a Herat regiment had been blown out of a cannon at Bulmier.

"This is a typical bazar story," says the correspondent. "The fact is that an orderly was executed for shooting an officer. Tarimmaz Khan is at Herat."

Moral Reform Society

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 9.—The ministers of the various churches of this city have decided to form a moral reform society, the object of which is to purify politics. Notices were read from every pulpit yesterday requesting the congregation to choose three delegates to represent the churches at the meeting to be held at the Second Presbyterian church next Tuesday evening.

A Million Friends.

A friend in need is a friend indeed, and not less than one million people have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and colds.—If you have never used this great cough medicine, one trial will convince you that it has wonderful curative powers in all diseases of Throat, Chest and Lungs. The Disadvantage.

Sometimes a boy loves his mother as much as his sister loves her, but he keeps away kind of cool like so she won't smell the tobacco on his breath.

An Old Soldier Made Happy.

During my term of service in the army I contracted chronic diarrhoea, says A. E. Bending of Halsey, Ore. Since then I have used a great amount of medicine, but when I found any that would give me relief they would injure my stomach, until Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was brought to my notice. I used it and will say it is the only remedy that gave me permanent relief and no bad results follow. For sale by Melville, the druggist, next to postoffice.

Mrs. McHenry and daughter of Columbus Grove were in town a few hours yesterday.

Frank Brown's pet snake is dead. It was a fine specimen of the blue racer and was five feet three inches long. The boys at the Clover Leaf shops discovered it in the tool room Sunday morning, and made short work of it. Now Brown is inconsolable and is telling some awful cries on the boys. Sam Hersey, he says, has not got back his color yet, and Mike Hartleib, when last seen, was running. Snake stories are at a premium now.

They Give Their Reasons.

Perhaps some of our readers would like to know in what respect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better than any other. We will tell you. When this remedy is taken as soon as a cold is contracted, and before it has become settled in the system, it will counteract the effect of the cold and greatly lessen its severity, and it is the only remedy that will do this. It acts in perfect harmony with nature and aids nature in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions, liquefying the mucus and causing its expulsion from the air cells of the lungs and restoring the system to a strong and healthy condition. No other will cure a cold so quickly. For sale by Melville, the druggist, next to postoffice.

I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a specific for croup. It is very pleasant to take, which is one of the most important requisites where a cough remedy is intended for use among children. A Striking Presentiment.

It is curious how future events are occasionally prefigured by some anticipatory token which, unlike presentiments and premonitory dreams, makes perhaps no impression at the time on those whom they concern.

Here is a striking example. One of Charles Dickens' sons, from some childish oddity of expression in his large, wondering eyes, was given by his father the very unique sobriquet of "The Ocean Specter," by which he was always called. The great novelist never knew of the weird significance he playfully bestowed appellation was to bear, for he himself had been nearly two years in his grave at the time his little "Ocean Specter," then a lieutenant in the royal navy, died and was buried at sea.—London Tit Bits.

Useless Purchases.

Two young Frenchmen, who were great friends, used to relate an amusing story of their impecunious days. Neither fame nor fortune had come to them, but they were always hopeful. The years had weighed heavily enough upon Jules, however, for him to have become entirely bald. One day Alphonse met him with a beaming countenance and cried gayly, "What do you think, Jules? I have been buying a strong box." "Then, Alphonse," replied Jules firmly, "I shall buy a hair brush."—Argonaut.

WHOM THE GODS LOVE.

You say that being so old
"I was time for him to die?"
Rings not your comment cold
And even inhuman? Why
Should tenderer tears be shed
When death lays young lives low,
Spared years of sorrow and fret,
Spared age's overthrow?

When young we are called away,
We shun untold regret;
For austere life will slay
Not merely ourselves, but yet
Brand with authentic sign
His despotism elsewhere;
Drear wisps of silvering line
O'er eyes beloved—plow line
And furrow on treasured locks.
"Whom the gods love die young,"
Ah me, there wisdom's tongue
With sovereign accent speaks!

Pity the old who die.
The young, behind them leave
Such bounteous gifts whereby
Pale hearts they shall not grieve;
Heart racked with no sigh,
Wound with many a scar.
Pity the old who die:
The young are happier far.
—Edgar Fawcett in Lippincott's.

LOVED AND WAITED.

Mme Novar reclined on a lounge in the magnificent boudoir of her Moscow house. Between her lips was a small cigarette and from a small table by her side she from time to time raised a tiny cup of coffee to her mouth.

Tonight I shall tell him all," she murmured, throwing one hand behind her head and gazing at the wreaths of smoke as they curled upward. "It is scarcely fair to deceive the boy longer. He loves me passionately and I—well, Martha Novar is also in love." She knocked the ash of her cigarette into a silver tray.

At that moment a man entered the room. He was clothed in the uniform of an officer in the imperial guard and was as handsome as a man well can be.

"Ah, good evening," he said gayly. "You see I have not kept you waiting tonight." He threw down his shako on the table and drew his chair close to the lounge.

"No, you are very good, Stanislas." Then after a slight pause, "I have something of great importance to tell you tonight—something that my cowardice has prevented me from telling you long before this and for which I have to suffer by marring the happiness of such a time."

She threw away her cigarette impetuously and then [illegible] continued.

"It is about Ivan Novar. [illegible]. He had [illegible] should [illegible] forgotten. What [illegible] have you for speaking of him [illegible]? Tonight you are his widow; tomorrow you will be the wife of Stanislas [illegible]."

"You misunderstand me. My husband is dead, but I did not lose much by his death. He married me because I was wealthy, because I had many servants and was rich in gold, but [illegible] months after the wedding he went away from me to live with the woman he loved. He never loved me, nor did I ever love him, yet I believed [illegible]. I should have told you all [illegible] is too late, but even now [illegible] to retract."

The young officer [illegible], pressing her hand with his lips.

"My poor Martha! What misery you must have suffered [illegible]. Still [illegible] whom you are [illegible]—you love. Is that not so?"

[illegible]

He was looking at her in amazement while she stood before him as pale as marble, with a slight tinge of red on either cheek.

[illegible]

Mme Novar was happy now. She felt that her duty had been done and now that this passion, the boy's love, was not only aroused but actually [illegible].

[illegible]

No one knew where [illegible] and [illegible] not mourn his loss [illegible] when the truth was known [illegible] pale and [illegible] with furrows.

When she met Stanislas [illegible] had first declared his love for her, she had resisted him unmercifully, but finally, and had shielded herself against the passion which but for this precaution would have plunged her into disgrace as great as that which polluted the name of her husband.

But one day she received the news of the death of Ivan Novar. With this intelligence the barrier of reserve which had been thrown up by herself and her ardent lover was removed and now they were to be married.

Stanislas was a comparative stranger to Moscow and [illegible] two and twenty, so that the history of Mme Novar was not known to him. All he knew was that she was a widow, but until then he had never had any idea of the truth.

The next day Mme Novar drove to a distant part of the city. Happy in her own thoughts, her eyes bright and her cheeks with a deep color as the biting wind touched her cheeks, she scarcely noticed the passersby as the sleigh slipped over the snow. When at the corner of a street the horses slowed down, she raised her eyes and they fell upon the figure of a tall, gaunt man wearing coarse, ragged clothes, torn and greasy.

Neither the persistent scowl on his face nor the thick, matted beard which covered his cheeks could blot out the air of refinement that pervaded his whole person. In the dragging, slouching walk there was a semblance of former firmness and elasticity of step that had been shattered by debauchery and vice, while the brown hands that swung carelessly by his side had lost but little of their delicacy and fitness.

The cry that she gave caused him to raise his head and look heavily at her. He stopped and would have entered the vehicle, but she hastily thrust a card into his hands and murmured hurriedly:

"Call on me at noon today."

He looked her full in the face for a moment, then turned on his heel and continued his walk. He was Ivan Novar.

"You have come back, then," said Mme Novar in a cold, harsh voice as her husband entered the room.

"Yes," he answered, folding his arms. "The rumor you heard of my death was a false one, set afloat by those whom it most concerned. I have for a long time been trying to discover you whereabouts to let you know the truth. I have come now to save you from disgrace."

"You have come to save me from disgrace," repeated Mme Novar, dwelling with bitterness on each word. "You have come to rob me of the only happiness which my life has ever known! You have come to poison my love to tear me away from the only man for whom I hold respect! You have dragged your own name into the mire, and with it mine! You ruined my life and blighted my hopes, and now you come to save me from disgrace! I thank you."

"You are very bitter," he answered. "I did it for your sake."

"And what are you going to do now?" she asked, sinking into a lounge.

"I shall go away—forever. I shall not see you again. I will let you know when I am—when you are free. That is all I can do."

There was a few moments' silence. Then she spoke again.

"And Vassily, where is she?"

"Dead," he answered hoarsely.

"Well, you took your happiness at the expense of mine, and you have suffered for it. I no longer have need of you." She waved her hand in the direction of the door, and the next moment he was gone.

For a little while Mme Novar sat cold, dumb and passionless, trying to gather the thoughts which flew madly through her brain. Then she sank on the lounge and burst into a flood of tears.

Shortly after Stanislas, unannounced, entered the room and stood watching [illegible] figure [illegible]. She did not hear his approach.

"Martha," he said, laying his hand on her arm, "what does this mean?" He went down on one knee beside the couch. She raised her head and staggered to her feet.

"It means that we must part, Stanislas. I lied to you [illegible] wondering [illegible] until [illegible] has [illegible].

"My husband is alive. I have seen him today."

"It is impossible! I [illegible] must [illegible]. You must be [illegible]. [illegible] whom you [illegible]."

[illegible]

[illegible]

"What do [illegible]—the [illegible]."

[illegible]

Two years later she [illegible] Mme Novar [illegible].

[illegible]

Five years ago—Mme Zernova led her across the room to where Stanislas stood by the side of his wife.

"Madame, let me introduce to you a new arrival in St. Petersburg, Captain Feovitch."

There was an awkward silence for a moment while Mme Novar went ghastly pale and pressed her lips tightly together.

"Allow me to introduce to you my wife," he said, holding out his hand toward a lovely young girl who glanced shyly at the woman before her.

"Let me congratulate you. You have indeed a sweet wife."

The words were slowly and painfully uttered.

When the others had moved away he said: "You did not wait for me. I waited until a year ago. Then I thought I should never hear."

He spoke with the same frank, boyish voice that had poured out its torrent of passionate love in her ears five years ago.

She returned from telling him the whole truth now—how she was free—and how she had waited all these years to claim him. She said nothing about it this.

Some one was playing a dreamy waltz while and the [illegible] was his young wife. Mme Novar roused herself from the reverie into which she had fallen and [illegible] her eyes round the room. When they fell on Mme Feovitch, she murmured:

"She is lovely." She smiled into his face and looked down at the [illegible].

When she raised her head again, Stanislas was gone. She did not [illegible] that night. She almost [illegible] ever.

In the cold light of early morning, after a night spent in her own room, Mme Novar, in a loose wrapper, stood by the [illegible] fire.

"Could you [illegible] happy? I truly know it and rejoice."

A moment later and a tiny heap of ashes lay beneath the burning taper.—Exchange.

MECHANISM OF A WATCH

A Wonderful Little Machine That Looks Practically Perfect.

Open your watch and look at the little wheels, springs and screws, each an indispensable part of the whole wonderful machine. Notice the little balance wheel as it flies to and fro unceasingly, day and night, year in and year out. This wonderful little machine is the result of hundreds of years of study and experiment. The watch carried by the average man is composed of 98 pieces, and its manufacture embraces more than 2,000 distinct and separate operations.

Some of the smallest screws are so minute that the unaided eye cannot distinguish them from fine steel filings or specks of dirt. Under a powerful magnifying glass a [illegible] is shown. The thread is 1/500 of an inch [illegible]. It takes 148,000 of these screws to weigh a pound, and a pound is worth [illegible]. The hairspring is a strip of the finest steel about 9 1/2 inches long and 1/100 inch wide and 27/10000 inch thick. It is coiled up in spiral form and finely tempered.

The process of making these springs was [illegible] the few manufacturers who now [illegible] knowledge [illegible]. The balance gives five vibrations every second, 300 every minute, 18,000 every hour, 432,000 every day and 157,680,000 every year. At each vibration it [illegible] which makes [illegible] every year. In order that [illegible] to [illegible] stop and [illegible] amount of labor performed by these [illegible] to make a comparison.

Take, for instance, a locomotive with 6 foot driving wheels. Let its wheels be run until they have given the same number of revolutions that a watch does in [illegible], and they will have covered a distance equal to 28 complete circuits of the earth. All this a watch does without other attention than winding once every 24 hours.—Locomotive Engineer.

One of the boldest robberies that has occurred in this city for some time was perpetrated at the residence of Chas L Bell [illegible] West Market street sometime after midnight last night

About six o'clock this morning when Mr Bell arose to dress he could not find his suit of clothes which he had left lying on a chair near the bed upon retiring. After dressing he continued the search for the missing garments. Entering the dining room he found a window open and on the outside his hat and a number of letters. [illegible]

SOCIETY -:- NEWS.

Under such and similar headings we can read all about the social events of the week about parties, balls and amusements of all kinds. Even the spicy bits of scandal and gossip, which never fail to interest us, are included in the above theme. What wonder then that we should look forward to this society news with more or less expectancy. Besides, we have just a faint idea that we will find our own name in print. O, what a bliss lies in this one thought. Society at large is greatly concerned at this time in the manner of dress, and even hard times cannot affect the demand for fashionable Clothing and Outfittings for men and boys. Michael's stores in the Opera House Block, are so well known to the public that we only need refer you to this popular shopping place to arouse in your mind visions of beautiful fashions for fall and winter which MICHAEL'S are now displaying. High class novelties in season and fair and square treatment of their patrons have made this firm's stores what they are. THE place for the people.
